ANOTHER BIG JUMP IN COTTON PRICES

Crop Estimates Are Scaled and Exports Are Larger-Southern Mills Buy.

It closed at 22.05c., with the gen-trade buying. Offerings increased later, with importers moderate sellers. Most of the advance was lost, with the market closing at a net gain of 1 to 3 points. Sales reported of $4.500 bags.

Official cables showed spot market at Rio 50 reis lower, but Santos spots were unchanged and futures 25 rels lower to 25 reis higher. Rio preported clearances of 4.000 bags for New York. Rain or showers were reported in all districts of Sac Paulo, with temperature renging from 25 to 43 degrees. Receipts. $2,000 bags at the two ports, compared with $6,000 last year. Further talk was heard of stiffening of ocean freight rates from Brasil. Offers of Santos 4s reported here at $1.15c. London credits.

Local spot market showing better demand this week, but tone somewhat irregular yesterday, with Rio 7s quoted at $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$c.

Until the last hour corn showed unmistakable strength. In the final dealings, however, signs that the market was overbought developed and decided breaks took place which nevertheless of did not deprive the market of good support. Seaboard interests that were said to have been among the leading buyers yesterday were reported to have taken profits to-day on a large scale near the end of the session.

Hardly anything but the weather conditions and the related crop outlook received the least attention as corn market factors. Frost had penetrated as far southward as Nebraska and there were predictions of additional frost tonight in lowa. Besides, rain and low temperatures appeared to be widespread.

A prospect though that much needed as far southward as Nebraska and there were predictions of additional frost tonight in lowa. Besides, rain and low temperatures appeared to be widespread.

A prospect though that much needed sunshine and warmth would follow the cold wave did much to lessen bullish sentiment before the close.

A strike of grain shovellers gave some independent firmness to oats. It was thought the strike might interfere with deliveries on September contracts. Most of the union shovellers, however, remained at work and indications were that the strike would not prove serious.

"The noteworthy feature of this week's trade was the increasing call for high grade garments. Whether the pressure for deliveries of fine quality apparel is due to an enhanced demand or a scarcity of supply is the mooted question at present. Many manufacturers in their commendable efforts to produce garments at prices sufficiently low to enable retailers to merchandise popular priced stocks profitably found the economic situation particularly relative to increased prices of fabrics and greater cost of labor such that their left Anderson—E.
